sideration as to whether a public offense has been committed, must give the accused the benefit of reasonable doubt. On this point we are enlightened by section 59 of the Criminal Code, which is interposition on the part of Rice. I assert as a legal proposition that he had no right to shoot Legram Figg. It is shown that Figg started toward him. Is that any reason why Rice should take his life? Was he correct in concluding that he had the right to take Figg's life? Did he believe it was necessary for him to kill Figg to save his own life?

[Here the counsel read a case reported on page 955 of Wharton's American Criminal Law, in which two men met by star light. One pressed the other for a fight the man on the defensive, who shot him down. Yet the prisoner was held for

Paris, Oct. 2 -P. M. Pasts, Oct. 2—P. M.

The Moniteur is silent on the subject of Rome and Italy. An official expression is eagerly looked for by the people.

Letaile du Nord newspaper says that the mil tary and naval forces destined for the Papal territory are quite ready to lave Toulon, but that the imperial order to depart is held back till the final reply of King Victor Emanuel to the Emperor's note is ready, and that the receipt of the Italian state paper may be delayed some few hours, owing to the existence of a corps has been ordered to operate in another direction.

La France says: We learn that the advance guard of General Dumoni's army embarked this morning at Toulon for Civitia Vecchia. It is certain that the French force will in any case arrive in home before the Italians.

It is stated that the Italian Government has declared itself powerless to resist the bands of Garibaldan invaders crossing the frontier or to protect the Holy See from their assaults. THE NEWS DONE UP IN A FEW PARA-GRAPHS.

Elizapethtown, Kv., Oct. 21, 1867. DEAR JOURNAL:—On Saturday night our lecidedly popular young band arrived rem the Munfordville fair in fine spirits and in fine musical trim. The following get themen of our place compose the band: liunean, Godfrey Wintersmith, Alf. Morris, Q. W. Johnson, James M. Rihn, Joseph Lott, R. L. Wintersmith, Jr., Samuel Leedom, Jas. S. Wintersmith, and Thomas Gcohegan.

The idea of forming a band was con ceived by them only about three or fou months ago, yet they have arrived at such perfection in so short a time that one, to hear them play, would imagine them to Saturday night's remembrance of "old l'owers' they have our warmest thanks, remembering us again. The serenadthey gave us was as highly appreciated as their music was enchanting. We had almost forgot to say that the tutor of this band is Prof. Rowden, of your city, who lesery s great eredit for imparting supeor musical knowledge in so short a time. A few days ago an old man by the name of Trainer, who lived in the suburbs of our city, killed a hog, partook freely of the meat for dinner, and at three o'clock on the same dny he was a corpse. These are all the particulars we have except that appointed Secretary pro tem , and M A is supposed the hearty meal of fresh pork caused his death.

Tame Pishes.—In llingham, near Boston, there is a pond where a little girl, not more than sixteen years old, who resides near the bank, has tamed the tishes to a remarkable degree. She began by throwing crumbs into the water. Gradually the fishes learned to distinguish her footsteps, and darted to the edge whenever she approached, and now they actually ent out of her hands, and allow her to touch their sealy sides. A venerable turtle is among ber regular pensioners.

Our statement, yesterday, that the yellow fever was proving much less fatal than on its first appearance, is fully corroborated by the official reports of interments vesterday. The Secretary of the Board of Health reports but three interments from yellow fever during the day. This report is made up from the records of the undertakers, and may be relied upon as correct.

In order to give the state of the case in as explicit a shape as possible, our re-porter called upon the different under-takers of the city this morning, to learn the names of those interred yesterday, the names of those interred yesterday, whose deaths were reported by the attending physicians as cansed by yellow fever. The only two interments which actually took place, were those of Mrs Carrie Wagner reported by McCafferty & Cornelins and Thomas G. Bruns, aged six years (reported by Owen Smith.) One other case was reported, but the interment did not take place until to-day. No yellow fever interments were made vesterday by ever interments were made yesterday by desers. Mesers. Holet, l'laherty, & Wesche, or Thos. O. Smith.

That the disease is prevailing to a considerable extent is beyond question, but the above facts show that the mortality is wery light, compared with the number of cases, and give grounds for the hope that as our physicians are becoming more familiar with the pecaliar characteristics of the disease, and nurses of experience have been obtained, it may be brought almost completely under control.

We are gratified to be able to announce, we are grathed to be able to announce, upon the authority of the Board of Health, the Howard Association, and our most prominent physicians, the gradual but rapid decline of the epidemic. In the first place, the corn was formerly bought of improvident landlords—and most Russian landlords are improvident—at something less than a furth of its value. The landowner usnally took all the risk of carting it. for, although the risk and expense of carriage were really very great, no true Russian ever counted that, as the labor was performed by his own horses a d his own scrfs, and even the rude wagons in which the cern was conveyed were made upon his estate. This petty increase of the French possessions which has heen announced with great pomp and selemnity by Admiral De La Grandiere, isutterly insignificant in every sense except as indicating the drift of French policy in the Eastern seas already well enough understood), and giving a further pronise that the naval station which France has seenred within the last five or six years at Saigon contains really the rudiments of a great empire, if she has the persistency and good lack to crown her lirst successes with future con-I'rench colonial government, as prac-sed at Saigon, demonstrates that were ord Cranhorne's verdict fact, it is not in

The cord serround them on every side.

The cream or preserve a behalf it.

Ilere, too, the peddler turns up again.
He is the same peddler who bought the cern months ago, and who paid an instalment of its price, parily in German jewelry, and minus his own commission. He is the same peddler, yet not the same. When last seen in the country he wore a long coat down to his heels, thick kneehoots, and a long, ragged beard. Now he is a dapper little fellow, with a trim moustache, in a curtaway jacket and white lord Cranhorne's verdict fact, it is not in India only that natives prefer an aboriginal to a foreign government, for the French method of rule has almost depopnlated the luxurisnty fertile delta of the Mekong river, which, until the new annexations, comprised the whole of the French deminions in Cochin China. The city of Saigon itself has heen deserted by all save the verjest dregs of the native population. Saigon itself has been deserted by all save the veriest dregs of the native population; ontlying villages have entirely disappeared; the rich rice fields of the delta, which were cultivated by a buy and thriving people before the French occupation, have, since 1800, sank into rank jungle; and the export of rice, the staple trade of the district, which under native rulers was somewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 tons ceive the rest of the moncy due; and the chief hutler knows han.

One thing also the chief hutler perceives, that he no longer speaks of the Boyard as 'His Regal Munificence.' He gave up that part of the business when he trimmed his beard, and has got a younger brother or an impecunious uncle who will take to it next year. Meantime, though ahrupt and dourneering in manner, he is not utkind. He treats the chief hutler and all the shaggy party who came with the corn wagons very freely tovokic, and, indeed, they are the very pick of the farm lands in their miserable vidage, and they look like a little pack of faithful dogs. All but the chief butler, however, soon get drunk, hopelessly drunk, drunk as only semi-savages can get drunk—drunk till they can neither see, hear, nor move. They make no noise, they have no rows, no fighting. Such things are never seen in Tussia. They merely driuk themselves blind, speechless, and then fall insensible mewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 tons anually, has dwindled down in 1863 or 163 to about 2,000 tons, without any export trade having arisen to take its place. Nearly the whole import trade of Saigon consists of provisions for the forces, and such munitions and materials as are not manufactured in the government arsenals. Goldsmith's famous complet, therefore, is not realized, for, while the men are decaying in the colony, wealth is not accumulating, nor is it likely to accumulate under the licavy restrictions which are imposed on all foreign enterprise, unless there may have heen some recent relaxation of which we are not aware.

Capital is thus excluded from the colony, and even if the short-sighted commercial prohibitions were not sufficient to hanish enterprise and trade, the grinding of to about 2,000 tons, without any ex-anish enterprise and trade, the grindin as the wealthy natives have almost to a as the wealthy natives have almost to a man left French territory, falls on the miserable creatures who constitute the population, would strike a deadly blow at the prosperity of the colony. Nevertheless we trankly admit that the French have done something to vindicate European civilization in the colony, although their works will not hear comparison with the orks will not hear comparison with the elendid and wonderful ruins of the city haps the first deling the poor fellow has. Now he has got a merion. The Barynia cor ded it to him with many earnest words and injunctions the very day he left home. She even called him back after he fairly started to repeat her wishes more precisely, and to give him a cup of tea and a piece of sngar to put between his teeth while drinking it; and she herself sat down with him for good luck and blessed him, and hade him godspeed upon his distant journey. The chief hutler does not freget these things, and immediately he has an opportunity he unmediately he has a had been deal of the colony to attest the recinement and the colony to a her colony to attest the recinement and the colony to attest the recinement and the colony to attest the recinement and the colony to a tatest the recinement and the colony to a the colony to attest the recinement and the colony to a the colony to attest the recinement and the whole place, there is the usual amount of wrangling, disagreement, and jealonsy among the handful of Europeans, who are he representatives of course of the much-raunted European civilization; and the lissension hetween the services is heightchief hutler, frankly admits that he con-siders this circumstance to proceed from watchcraft, and adds that he strongly in-sisted on that view of the case to the Ba-rynia. She, however, had maintained that the German jewelry, when worn, espe-cially in a warm room, or when rubbed, emitted a cankerons smell, like copper, which she had never heard was a peculiar presently of witches as their fashionable vaunted European civilization; and the dissension between the services is heightened in this instance by the colony being under naval administration, to the almost entire exclusion of the military.

That France, nuder the regime of the present Emperor especially, is aiming at an Asiatic empire, is no longer a matter of doubt; and in Saigon she has secured one of the finest naval stations in the Eastern seas, which will by and by he rendered impregnable, and will speedily be better supplied with the means of maintaining a fleet in efficiency than any port in Oriental waters helonging to letheric the string of th which sie had nover heard was a peculiar preperty of witches, as their fashionable perfume was always understood to he primstone. The Barynia had therefore the took the German jewelry, with a reposit hat the peddler would obligingly set in the price paid for it, which is then to be invested in the purchase of three new dresses from Mile. Lacarottense, the local French milliner, and some tea, coffee, knives, fannel, tohneco, and general simeracks to be purchased from Mynherr Schrappedf, the German all-sorts shop-keeper. Schnapsgelf, the German all-sorts shop-keeper.

After much simple talk to the same effect, and to which the transformed peddler listens with such grave attention as only a Greek can assume when he is making money, this personage informs the chief havier that he strongly inclines to the opinin that wit heratthas, as he supposed, really been at the bott m of the whole thing. The peddler has heard of manyrec at instances of the kind, and the best way of treating the present case will be to wrap up the German jewelry in my lards, over which a charm the peddler knows has been pronounced, and bury it und ran oak tree in the first quarter of the new moon. It will then he restored to its pristine excellence. On no account, however, will the peddler return the money, as such a proceeding is known to he extremely unlucky. And a by this time the chief butler, being utterly puzzled and bewildered, gets drunk like the rest of his companions, perhaps not quite so drunk, but drank at heart to the terms and in the content of the companions, perhaps not quite so drunk, but drank at heart to the terms of the second of the companions, perhaps not quite so drunk, but drank at heart to the terms of the second of the companions, perhaps not quite so drunk, but drank at heart to the terms of the second of the companions. lves at Saigon was an extension of their selves at Saigon was an extension of their influence northward over Cambodia, an appranage of the Siamese kingdom, which they wrested from its sovereign lord, and after creeting it into a kingdom placed it under the protectorate of France, with the privilege of prohibiting the consuls of any foreign nation from residing in the country. The protectorate is a preliminary to annexation, and when that is effected the way is opened for tampering with Siam or making fresh inroads into Alban. companions, perhaps not quite so drunk, but drunk, at least, to the tears and sing-ing point—ready, at all events, to sign anything for his friend the peddler. THIS YING, OFFICIAL AND UNOFFICIAL.

Then begins the robbery of the corn wagons. All through the night active thieves, mostly boys trained for the purpose, piller small quantities of grain from the innomerable carts huddled in disorder, confusion, and darkness about the city gates. While the chief but it is detaking also comes the officer of the (textion by its

has been a frequent contributor in Engtable on English journal. He is alive light to an English journal. He is alive to the importance of opening up the valley of the Menam river, at the mouth of which his capital stands, hy means of a railway from the capital across Siamese and British territory to Moulmen, thus giving his commerce a rapid and direct onlet into the Bay of Bengal. The annexation of Siam or of Anam, and the consequent establishment of a French highway along the Mekeng river into Burmah, hrings France at once into contact, if not collision, with English interests in Burmah and Southern China. If we are to establish a commercial highway we are to establish a commercial highway between China and the Bay of Bengal, between China and the Bay of Bengal, we cannot allow French influence to precominate in Burmah. Judging from all present appearances, and by the growth of public opinion, it is manifestly the destiny of Britain to add Burmah to the British dominions.

By thus making our Eastern frontier conterminous with China, we provide a direct commercial channel of communication between Southern China and the Indian Ocean, and prepare the way for

HOW THEY SELL GRAIN IN RUSSIA.

A writer in the London News describes the way in which the grain dealers of Russia do husiness. To their clever trickiness he ascribes the present high price of wheat in the Enropean markets. This price, he thinks, will not be much reduced until the harvests of Podolia, Volhynia, and Kiev shall be brought directly to the seaports by railway, an event which cannot be long delayed. We quote a few passages:

THE CARRIAGE OF GRAIN.

It was Mr. Nevin's turn to rest a moment on his osrs. In his next communication the following passage occurs. "Your pretext is that I am a 'cripple and suspended between crutches." To one so conversant with the 'code' as yourself, you must confess to such balderdash! Generals Ilood and Ewell are both one-legged men, and each commanded a corps after their misfortune. Yet, under your construction of the 'code,' you could not and would not recognize these gentlemen as he'ng within the pale of honor, because 'suspended between crutches.' These are the proper conclusions under the 'code,' as I understand it, and though you refuse positively, 'under any circumstances whatever,' to recognize me as a principal in this matter, and, though forced by your declaratiors, and my duty to my friend, Captain O Conner, I withdraw in favor of the latter; yet I do so under solemn protest against any such interpretation of the 'code.'

Colonel Farrow accepted this challenge

Colonel Farrow accepted this challenge the same day, and proposed to fight the next morning at sunrise. The net result of this remarkable quadrilateral quarrel is thus sated by the Atlanta papers:
"Captain Thomas O Conner and Colonel II. P. Farrow met at sunrise on the 12th inst., on the east hank of the Savannah river, and exchanged shots. After the first fire, the challenging party promptly expressed themselves satisfied, and the friends of the parties declared the matter satisfactorily and honorably adjusted.
